

Program Overview

BATTI's Educational Leadership Program, offered in partnership with The University of the Pacific Benerd School of Education, is a two-year program that enables highly qualified K–12 educators to transform their education experience into a meaningful career in school leadership.

We aim to attract the most dynamic students, identified by their independent, charter, and public school districts as potential leaders. Applicants must propose a school change project that will be the core, culminating project of their MA. Leaders at their current school are requested to make an initial commitment to supporting the project.

During the first summer, a “boot camp” will kick off the program for the cohort group, allowing them to bond as a group as they begin to look at their own leadership styles. We will also introduce the group to design thinking, as a way to explore how an effective leader facilitates school change.

In the first year we invite our students to explore the overarching question: What fundamental changes and innovation are needed in America's public, independent and charter schools? Through weekly evening sessions, online work, and workshops, the candidates will complete three semesters of course work including courses on Instructional Leadership, Assessment for Learning and Research Methods.

It is in the second year of the program that we hope candidates will deepen their career habits of mind and action—introspection and reflection, assessing needs, listening, concise writing and clear speaking, flexibility and resiliency, the the confidence to lead. They will explore this challenging question: How can I be an inspirational and effective leader of educational innovation and change?

Using case studies, group projects and focused reading assignments, students will continue coursework designed to prepare not only school managers but also innovative coaches and leaders. The coursework and learning experiences include school law, finance and administration of human resources and fulfill requirements for the California Preliminary Administrative Services Credential.* The program culminates with a Master's Oral Exam in which students present the learning from their coursework, fieldwork, and School Change Project. Candidates seeking their Administrative Credential will, in addition, submit an Exit Portfolio describing learning experiences and reflections linked to the California Professional Standards for Educational Leaders (CPSELS).

Coursework and cohort support will be in place to strengthen each student's understanding of his or her main work—the hands-on experience of planning and executing an authentic school change project. These projects will vary greatly from candidate to candidate, but will all be school-wide meaningful efforts mentored by an in-school leader in concert with the BATTI staff.

*Please note that the State of California requires a CA Clear Teaching Credential to receive a CA Preliminary Administrative Services Credential. We anticipate having some students seeking the MA only and others seeking both the MA and Preliminary Administrative Services Credential.

BATTI's Innovative History

BATTI held its first class on August 29th, 2002 with its charter cohort of 20 students embarking on the original two-year program. The program is built around the theory that people learn best when learning is connected to who they are and what they care about; when learning has a deep and meaningful social purpose; and when learning occurs in a manner that allows students to build their own understanding over time and with a strong element of "doing." BATTI's success over the last decade has been proven in many forms: increasing applicant pools; doubling in enrollment; 98% success rate in placing graduates in public and private schools; and a retention rate of 80% of our 450 graduates still teaching in the classroom.

Our school partners in the independent and public school world, as well as our graduates who have gained up to 12 years of teaching experience, helped inspire our new educational venture—the Educational Leadership Program. Together we are preparing the next generation of innovative, creative, and transformative school leaders. We approach this in the same way we did in creating "BATTI Classic": BATTI gathers together exceptional teacher leaders and aspiring school leaders in an uplifting cohort group; connects them with stimulating and experienced school leaders and educators who will serve as their instructors and advisors; and places these new leaders in meaningful practical fieldwork where they can be actively mentored by veteran school leaders.

Partnership with University of the Pacific

BATTI's partnership with University of the Pacific enables educational leaders to gain a Master's degree and credential while continuing to work.

Founded in 1851, the University of the Pacific is California's oldest chartered university. It is an independent, coeducational university serving more than 6,000 students on three campuses in Northern California. Established by pioneer Methodist ministers in 1851, Pacific was first in the nation to offer an undergraduate teacher corps program, and to send an entire class to an overseas campus. Pacific has earned widespread recognition for its student-centered approach to education, its many firsts and innovations, and the accomplishments of its 55,000 alumni, including jazz musician Dave Brubeck and San Francisco mayor George Moscone.

From its beginning, the University of the Pacific emphasized the preparation of "preachers and teachers," and those who planned to teach made up a large proportion of its student body during the University's first 50 years. The School of Education was officially established shortly after the College of the Pacific moved to Stockton in 1924.

For more than 75 years, the Gladys Benerd School of Education has been the primary academic unit at Pacific responsible for the preparation of teachers and other professionals to work with diverse populations in Pre-K through high school and beyond. Hundreds of graduates have become teachers, counselors, school psychologists, principals, subject matter specialists, and superintendents in both public and private education.

The Gladys Benerd School of Education currently offers the following degrees and credentials: Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts in Education, Education Specialist, and Doctor of Education degrees, as well as California credential programs in Multiple Subject, Single Subject, Special Education, Administrative Services, and Pupil Personnel Services in School Psychology. Its programs for Pre-K through 12 educators are fully accredited by both the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing and Council for the Accreditation of Educator Preparation (CAEP, formerly NCATE).

As an off-site university partnership, BATTI follows in the footsteps of the successful Aspire public charter network, which affiliated with Pacific in 2009. Our academic program duplicates the Pacific course sequence, while adjusting for particular program details to respond to the needs of our educational leaders. Pacific has generously agreed to discount the cost of its Master's program for BATTI leaders in recognition of the work BATTI personnel provide to administer the program, and in light of the off-site nature of the program.

"Education leaders need to face unforeseen challenges with compassion and optimism, and to champion the mission and maintenance of our nation's school's and the health and achievement of children. BATTI's instructors, cohort and school change project all prepared me for this higher calling."

School Change Project

The next generation of school leadership is about innovation and change. In the BATTI tradition of learning by doing, a key feature of the UOP/BATTI educational leadership program is the initiation and completion of a school change project.

WHAT IS THE REQUIREMENT?

As part of the application process, candidates should submit a preliminary proposal that outlines the objectives and challenges of their proposed project as well as an indication of the level of support for the project within their employment setting. Once accepted into the program, candidates will need to work with their mentor to further develop the proposal into an authentic school change project of genuine value to the school or organization. An exemplary project will also maximize the opportunities to pilot the use of leadership skills and tools learned in the program.

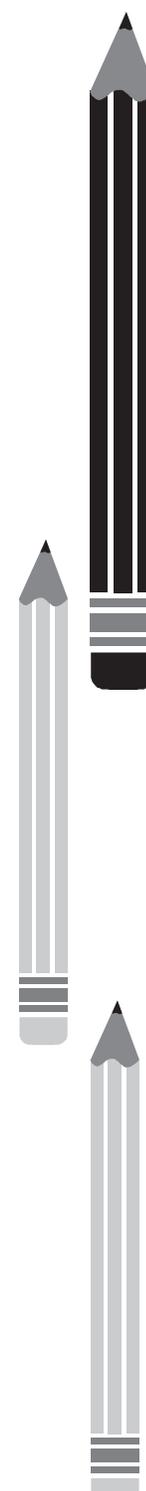

WHAT IS A "SCHOOL CHANGE PROJECT"?

A School Change Project (Action Research Project) is a 2-year fieldwork endeavor that allows you to lead positive change at your school. It is also a key opportunity to pilot the use of leadership skills and tools learned in the program. School change is challenging. Rob Evans said it well in The Human Side of School Change: Reform, Resistance and the Real-life Problems of Innovation, when he wrote that change not only can arouse resistance, but it also "provokes loss, challenges competence, creates confusion and causes conflict." But change is also a profound opportunity. In Managing Transitions, How to Make the Most of Change, William Bridges maps out a strategy for managing change that highlights the opportunities for creativity and innovation that arise in any transition. A UOP/BATTI school change project will provide the best learning opportunity if it is one that is big enough that the leadership candidate engages in a real school challenge, a dilemma that benefits from research, demands facilitating a diverse group to a common understanding, provides opportunity to orchestrate collective action, and includes collaborative learning through assessment and reflection.

EXAMPLES OF SCHOOL CHANGE PROJECTS

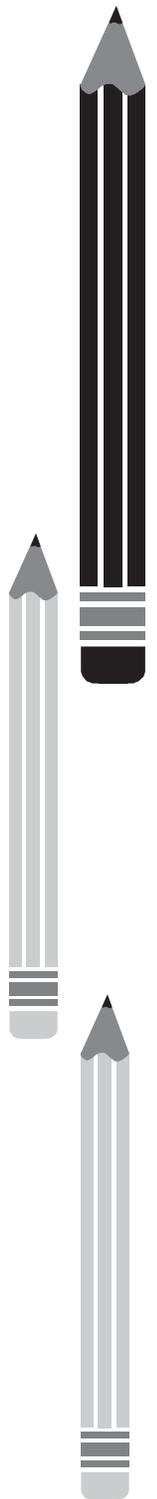

- A new Dean of Students wants to create an anti-bullying and conflict resolution curriculum, and with the assistance of the Head of School and her advisor in her first year, she visits and contacts other schools and researches possible programs. In her second year, she facilitates faculty conversations to negotiate the differences of opinion and arrive at a common understanding of a new school-wide program. She coordinates the launch, including the student and parent rollout, and throughout the year facilitates reflective conversations to assess and hone the program.
- A strong teacher and aspiring school leader is asked by the school principal to guide the school in implementing and organizing a Response to Intervention Program. He is in charge of progress monitoring of the system, as well as leading professional development workshops and instructional coaching. In his first year, he works with the school administration to assess current systems to determine what is working. He also helps to reorganize the daily schedule, so that there is a designated time for Tier II support during the school day. In his second year, he does a deeper analysis to set an action plan with measurable goals. These goals involve learning the data system in order to accurately measure improvements in achievement, attendance and discipline.

- An identified strong teacher has begun to mentor new teachers and act as instructional coach for K-2 teachers at her school. In her first year, she researches professional learning communities, coaching models, and alternative systems of professional development and faculty evaluation. In her second year, she leads a faculty process to develop consensus and implementation plan for a new school-wide integrated peer driven approach to faculty.

"They always say time changes things, but you actually have to change them yourself."
